Employment Information

Sports Development Officers play a key role in promoting and increasing participation in sports and physical activities within communities. They develop sports programs, support grassroots initiatives, and ensure inclusivity in sports by engaging people of all ages, backgrounds, and abilities. By promoting participation, they help improve physical health, mental well-being, and social integration. They connect with local communities, sports organisations and schools to build partnerships.

Sports Development Officers are employed by sporting clubs / sporting associations, sport's governing bodies, local government and councils, government-funded centres (such as the Australian Institute of Sport, state, territory, or regional institutes or academies of sport). They may also be self-employed.

Note: Applicants nominating this occupation are required to specify the sport they are promoting – whether from the list of ANZSCO specialisations or other.

Supporting material for assessment

Applicants nominating for this occupation are advised to provide any additional evidence to support employment claims, such as:

- . professional development certificates
- . cover letter to explain your role and a record of the sport programs you are running or promoting

Note: The above supporting materials are considered as supplementary evidence and will not substitute a formal educational qualification or highly relevant employment.
