Other fields of study may be considered highly relevant for a Full Skills Assessment if the employment is assessed as highly relevant and the field of study pertains to the applicant's area of consulting.

*This includes qualifications assessed at AQF Bachelor, Master and Doctoral level

Highly relevant major fields of study include:

- Business Management
- Organisation Management

Employment Tasks

Highly relevant tasks include, but are not limited to:

- assisting and encouraging the development of objectives, strategies and plans aimed at achieving optimal customer experience and satisfaction and the effective use of organisations' resources and capabilities
- identifying business and organisational gaps and opportunities through application of continuous improvement and change methodologies
- analysing and evaluating current systems, capabilities and structures
- advising clients on recommendations based on analysis of current-state gaps to provide solutions to organisational problems
- preparing and recommending proposals to revise methods and procedures, alter work flows, redefine job functions and support organisational innovation and improvements
- assisting in implementing approved recommendations
- providing coaching and mentoring to individuals and teams to build specific capabilities

Additional tasks may include:

- Meeting with clients to introduce services and discuss consultancy objectives.
- Developing and deploying project management methodologies.
- Undertaking and reviewing work studies by analysing existing and proposed methods and procedures such as administrative and clerical procedures.
- Recording and analysing organisations' work flow charts, records, reports, manuals and job descriptions.
- Preparing and recommending proposals to revise methods and procedures, alter work flows, redefine job functions and resolve organisational problems.
- Assisting in implementing approved recommendations, issuing revised instructions and procedure manuals, and drafting other documentation.
- Reviewing operating procedures and advising of departures from procedures and standards.
- Managing client expectations.

While a variety of specialised roles within management consultancy may be accepted, applicants should be performing a role at the required skill level in terms of comparison to the tasks listed above. Further considerations also apply, as detailed below.

Employment Information

Consulting involves providing expert advice to people working in a particular field. Consultants are found in a wide variety of areas, including ICT, agriculture, recruitment, taxation, scientific research, environmental management, etc. Management consultants provide advice on management-related topics.

Management Consultants usually work as independent consultants or are employed by a management consulting firm providing professional expertise and advice relating to strategy, structure, management and operations to organisations with the aim of meeting the organisation's long-term purposes and objectives, for a consultancy fee. The consultancy process involves identifying and assessing a problem or analysing a specific area of an organisation, reporting on findings, and formulating and often implementing recommendations for improvement.

Determining the scope, purpose, methodology, and context of consulting engagements delivered is a key component of the assessment process. In determining whether a role involves sufficient consulting on management topics, consideration will also be given to the scope and breadth of advice provided and the impact of the issues addressed on the client organisations. The management topics and organisational problems advised upon typically relate to the ongoing planning, monitoring, analysis and assessment of how organisations can achieve strategic goals and objectives, broadly conceived. While advice may be provided on potential improvements to ongoing operational processes, management consultants are expected to demonstrate the capacity for strategic advice in their roles.

Roles without a clear consultancy basis, such as many managerial roles or those focusing on facilitating ongoing improvements to existing internal processes only, are not considered highly relevant.
