- calculating and comparing costs for required facilities management services.
- planning for future development in line with strategic business objectives.
- managing change to ensure minimal disruption to a company's business activities.
- ensuring compliance with health and safety regulations and legislation.
- planning space and resource allocation for new or existing premises.
- coordinating and leading facilities management staff.
- monitoring service level agreements.
- responding to emergencies or urgent issues as they arise.

Employment information

The role of Facilities Manager can be both strategic-tactical and operational. The strategic-tactical aspect deals with informing clients and users of business risk and potential impact of facilities decisions; the operational aspect deals with compliance and facilities operations.

A company's facilities may be managed by a single individual or by a facilities management team, and services may be delivered by dedicated in-house professionals or outsourced partially or fully to external providers.

Facilities Managers can be found working predominantly for a facilities management provider or as a direct employee managing a facilities management team internally. Management of contractors is critical to the role.

This occupation excludes positions that predominantly involve the management of the provision of only one particular service to a facility or managing one particular relationship. For example, a position that manages the cleaning contract for a facility but no other contracts relevant to the facility will not be assessed positively.

Supporting material for assessment

Applicants nominating this managerial occupation must submit an organisational chart. An organisational chart should include:

- The company letterhead,
- Your job position,
- The job position of your superiors and subordinates, as well as,
- All positions reporting to your immediate supervisor and to your direct subordinates.

If you are unable to obtain an organisational chart from your employer, please provide a statutory declaration outlining the required information and the reasons why this information cannot be provided.
