Employment information

The role of Facilities Manager can be both strategic-tactical and operational. The strategic-tactical aspect deals with informing clients and users of business risk and potential impact of facilities decisions; the operational aspect deals with compliance and facilities operations.

A company's facilities may be managed by a single individual or by a facilities management team, and services may be delivered by dedicated in-house professionals or outsourced partially or fully to external providers.

Facilities Managers can be found working predominantly for a facilities management provider or as a direct employee managing a facilities management team internally. Management of contractors is critical to the role.

This occupation excludes positions that predominantly involve the management of the provision of only one particular service to a facility or managing one particular relationship. For example, a position that manages the cleaning contract for a facility but no other contracts relevant to the facility will not be assessed positively.
